Palliative Care

“Palliative care is an approach that improves the quality of life of patients and their families facing the problem associated with life-threatening illness, through the prevention and relief of suffering by means of early identification and impeccable assessment and treatment of pain and other problems, physical, psychosocial and spiritual.”

Imagine ◆ Innovate ◆ Inspire

Three simple words boldly express what HealthCare Chaplaincy wants to do—in ever-changing, mission-driven ways—as it enters its second half-century.

Imagine

Fifty years ago, who could have imagined the transformations that health care would undergo, and how prominent and influential multifaith chaplaincy care would become in advocating treatment of the whole person? Yet, as early as the 4th century BCE, Plato understood the necessity of integrated care. “As you ought not to attempt to cure the eyes without the head, or the head without the body, so neither ought you to attempt to cure the body without the soul...For the part can never be well unless the whole is well... And therefore, if the head and body are to be well, you must begin by curing the soul.” (Early Dialogues, Charmides)

Innovate

Health care is an innovative and dynamic field, which is striving to provide accessible and affordable patient-centered care. America is at a critical turning point in determining how it will best do this. As science, technology, care processes, and care teams have become more complex and diverse, the way in which the activities of care are organized and the institutional contexts in which they occur have become important determinants of the effectiveness and efficiency of that care. As better health delivery models are being developed and tested, palliative care will increase in importance.

At HealthCare Chaplaincy, we are becoming a palliative care nonprofit organization with a distinctive vision for how to provide outcomes-oriented, spirit-centered palliative care for persons with life-altering, progressive illness. Palliative care, which the New York Times called “one of the fastest-growing fields of medicine,” is built on a conceptual foundation that has long informed the thinking and practice of professional chaplains: putting patients at the centre of care, empowering them, listening and responding to them, working in partnership with them and their loved ones, and facilitating their choices whenever and wherever possible.

Inspire

The Latin root—inspirare—is “life-giving”; it literally means breathing life, exerting an animating, enlivening, or exalting influence on someone or something. For 50 years, HealthCare Chaplaincy has been inspiring people and institutions, students and researchers, city and nation. While it is consoling and instructive to look back and to take stock of all the good that HealthCare Chaplaincy has done in nurturing the lives of the more than five million patients and thousands of students it has cared for and supported through the years, this annual report will introduce our friends and supporters to the Chaplaincy’s inspiring and expansive vision for the next fifty years.

Palliative care is a prism through which HealthCare Chaplaincy is envisaging its future. We expect to help make “palliative care” a household term in America—where physical, psychological and spiritual needs are consistently met and cultural and religious traditions are honored. HealthCare Chaplaincy will strengthen and leverage its strategic health care and research partnerships, expand the scope of the education offered to health professionals, develop and clinically test new and integrated approaches to patient care, and build and operate the nation’s first palliative care campus.

Imagine ◆ Innovate ◆ Inspire

We invite each of our benefactors and philanthropic partners, our trustees and colleagues and friends, to join us on this imaginative, innovative and inspiring journey. We thank you for the countless ways in which your confidence and support are enabling HealthCare Chaplaincy to “find meaning” and “bring comfort” to those in need of compassionate and astute care.

Mission Statement

To improve the effectiveness and efficiency of health care through the innovative ways chaplains promote and advance palliative care research, education and practice.
About Us

Over 50 years have helped more than 5 million people find meaning and comfort

Our chaplains help patients, loved ones and health care institution staff to discover and use their spiritual and religious resources in the service of their decision-making and healing – regardless of religion or beliefs.

Unique combination of services, education, and research

• We are the direct provider of professional, board-certified chaplaincy care in an expansive network of metropolitan New York hospitals and long-term care facilities whose chaplaincy departments we manage and staff.

This care helps to improve patient outcomes and satisfaction through the unique and constructive connections that professional chaplains are able to create with people of all religions, beliefs, races, ethnicities, cultures, and backgrounds.

• We are expanding our work into community settings through senior centers, local congregations, and correctional facilities to help more people who are seeking spiritual support as they deal with crises and loss.

• Our Center for Continuing and Professional Studies, a major provider of chaplaincy education in the United States, is now affiliated with Columbia University Teachers College.

• Our Spears Research Institute is a leading center on the relationship between spiritual care and health.

Developing America’s first Palliative Care Campus

Palliative care helps people with life-altering illness live well and live fully.

The New York Times reports that palliative care is one of the fastest growing fields in medicine.

What People Say About Us

“Palliative care helps the whole person – body, mind, and spirit. Understanding and satisfying the patient’s spiritual needs is vital to effective palliative care, and I view HealthCare Chaplaincy to be expert in this field.”

– R. Sean Morrison, MD, Professor of Geriatrics and Palliative Care, Mount Sinai School of Medicine and Director, National Palliative Care Research Center

“HealthCare Chaplaincy’s professional chaplains are an important part of our health care team. I’m convinced that they help improve outcomes in difficult medical situations. They bridge cultural gaps, and bring comfort and support to patients, families and staff who are dealing with great stress.”

– Jim Foy, Former President and CEO, St. John’s Riverside Hospital, Yonkers, NY

“The gold standard of research and advocacy on behalf of professional chaplaincy.”

– David A. Lichter, D.Min, Executive Director, National Association of Catholic Chaplains

“Unlike most clinical pastoral education programs that are housed in one institution, HealthCare Chaplaincy has created a model of education and pastoral/spiritual care that brings several unrelated institutions under one umbrella. This is the kind of innovation that is its hallmark.”

– The Rev. Dr. Teresa Snorton, Executive Director of the Association for Clinical Pastoral Education and Presiding Bishop for the Eleventh Episcopal District of the Christian Methodist Episcopal Church
From the Executive Vice President & COO

In FY 2010 HealthCare Chaplaincy embarked on a re-engineering effort to align our clinical practice, professional education and research work with our focus on palliative care. What chaplains do and have done throughout our 50 year history is an important component of palliative care – providing comfort and helping people find meaning in their lives as they grapple with life-altering illness.

The field of palliative care formally recognizes the importance of spiritual care, and HealthCare Chaplaincy is taking the lead to expand the role of spirit-centered palliative care through a range of important initiatives:

Through continuing professional education – We have begun to develop the first continuing professional education curriculum that will equip chaplains to be effective members of trans-disciplinary palliative care teams, alongside physicians, nurses, social workers, and others. Once this curriculum is created, the Association of Professional Chaplains, the certifying body, will establish the process for board certified chaplains to gain additional certification in the palliative care sub-specialty.

Through clinical practice – As we continually work with our partner institutions to help them achieve their missions, we are highlighting the growing area of palliative care services.

Through research – We are focusing on how the spiritual dimension of palliative care makes a difference in the health of patients, and how family members, caregivers and health care institutions and their staffs benefit from spiritual care.

Through the development of America’s first Palliative Care Campus – This will house a 120 unit enhanced assisted living residence for persons with serious illness; our own education, research, clinical practice and administrative offices; and a geriatric and palliative care medical home that will provide outpatient health care both for residents and people who live in the neighboring communities.

In the pages that follow, my colleagues will tell you more about these exciting initiatives.

Claire H. Altman
Executive Vice President and Chief Operating Officer
The Center for Continuing and Professional Education

Applying both inspiration and imagination, the Center developed new programs and sources of revenue in FY 2010. This innovation continues in FY 2011.

- We created and delivered in Fall 2010 a seminar of thirteen sessions for all staff to become conversant in the sub-specialty of palliative care. Nationally recognized speakers and qualified HealthCare Chaplaincy faculty led the seminar. Each session is videotaped and archived together with the teaching materials on HCC’s intranet. The curriculum covered:

  1. The philosophy of palliative care
  2. Current research findings
  3. Pain and symptom identification and management
  4. Models of spiritual screening, history taking, spiritual care and assessment
  5. Ethical and legal issues pertaining to palliative care
  6. Advance directives – legally valid documents which identify the person you select to be your voice for your health care decisions if you cannot speak for yourself and you would or would not want at the end of life.
  8. Relevant theological and spiritual issues (suffering, hope, meaning, afterlife)
  9. Cultural issues germane to palliative care
  10. The roles of prayer and ritual in palliative care

- We are redesigning our clinical education and pastoral educator preparation curriculum to strengthen the role of the spiritual care specialist on the palliative care team.

- We are creating grant proposals to fund the development of palliative care sub-specialty education and certification for board certified chaplains in conjunction with the professional chaplaincy associations.

- We launched a new Online Learning Center and two courses which are generating new revenue.

- We have signed a collaboration agreement with Teachers College of Columbia University to offer our supervisory education students and other pastoral educators an opportunity to earn the Doctor of Education degree in Adult Learning & Leadership.

- We revamped and upgraded the PlainViews® online newsletter into a paid, revenue-generating subscription service for chaplains and other spiritual care providers worldwide.

- We are reconfiguring Supervisory Education Students as part-time students and part-time chaplains.

- We are combining the roles of Clinical Pastoral Education Supervisors and Pastoral Care Directors in institutions where education and clinical practice are valued equally.

The Rev. Dr. Martin Montonye
Vice President, Academic Affairs
HealthCare Chaplaincy is taking a leadership role in a national effort to make spiritual care led by professional chaplains central to the health care enterprise.

We are advocating with our local clinical partners and in various national forums for a transdisciplinary model of care in which all members of the team are trained in and administer spiritual care. In this model, the professional chaplain is the spiritual care leader on the treatment team and also takes an active role in helping to plan and deliver physical and emotional care. Thus, care is more patient centered because the patient’s desire to include spiritual and religious care is honored.

To move this envisioned model forward, HealthCare Chaplaincy continues to provide innovative leadership on various levels, mainly through the lens of palliative care. Many of our chaplains take leadership roles on their institutional palliative care teams and lead training on issues of spiritual care and cultural competence:

- The Rev. Dr. Sarah Fogg co-chairs the institutional Ethics Committee at St. John’s Riverside Hospital and has done significant palliative care training for hospital staff.
- The Rev. Jon Overvold sits on the Ethics and Cancer Committees for North Shore University Hospital.
- The Rev. George Handzo was a major project advisor and co-author on the Archstone Foundation’s ground-breaking initiative which developed national guidelines for spiritual care in palliative care. He continues to present on this initiative which has drawn significant national attention.

HealthCare Chaplaincy and its staff continue to take the lead in inspiring chaplaincy colleagues nationally and all those involved in spiritual and religious care to raise the level of spiritual care and the leadership of professional chaplains.

- The Rev. Jon Overvold, in his role as Chair of the Commission on Quality in Pastoral Services of the Association of Professional Chaplains, led an effort to establish the first Standards of Practice for professional board-certified chaplains in any realm of health care, thus inspiring his colleagues to a higher level of performance and integration. Three other members of Chaplaincy’s clinical staff also participated in this initiative.
- The John Templeton Foundation awarded HealthCare Chaplaincy a grant to a) establish and evaluate the evidence base for spiritual care as delivered by the professional chaplain as a fully-integrated and measurable component of health care, and b) to increase the knowledge pool regarding the quantifiable results produced by the consistent delivery of quality chaplaincy care.

The photo and caption at the top of the page show you the expert team we have assembled to help us accomplish these objectives which will have significant impact for the profession.

The Rev. George Handzo, BCC, CSSBB
Vice President, Pastoral Care Leadership & Practice
Research contributes significantly to HealthCare Chaplaincy's evidence-based practice and professional education programs. That principle guides the work of the Spears Research Institute.

- Over the past year, the Spears Research Institute has published ten peer-reviewed articles in nursing, psychology, psychiatric, chaplaincy and other health care journals, with the generous support of the John Templeton Foundation.
- The articles include studies on the level of religious involvement in the United States, the association between religious beliefs and mental health, praying with patients, referrals to chaplains by nurses, and the effects of clinical pastoral education on self-reflection, emotional intelligence and pastoral care skills.
- Spears Research Institute staff and John Templeton Foundation Research Fellows have presented numerous posters and papers at scientific conferences, including a symposium on “Psychological Aspects of Chaplaincy and Pastoral Care” at the annual meeting of the Eastern Psychological Association.
- Two papers presented at the third annual conference on Spirituality, Theology and Health, at Duke University are particularly relevant to HealthCare Chaplaincy’s transition into the field of palliative care. One was a review of the literature on “Religion, Spirituality and Palliative Care.” The other was titled: “Holistic Needs and the Brain: A Theoretical Model.” Although its connection to palliative care may not be obvious from its title, the point of the paper is that people's needs that are typically thought of as merely psychosocial are represented in the brain, and therefore are biological needs.
- Supported by a grant from the Fannie E. Rippel Foundation, the Spears Research Institute conducted a large study of hospice, palliative and pastoral care and end-of-life outcomes, by combining data from the American Hospital Association’s annual survey of hospital facilities and services with hospital data from the Dartmouth Atlas of Health Care. The findings indicate that patients who receive hospice care, palliative care, or pastoral care are significantly more likely to enroll in hospice compared to patients who do not receive such care. The observed effects are independent of one another, which means that they are additive – patients who receive palliative care and pastoral care are more likely to enroll in hospice than those who only receive just one or the other.
- Other research by Spears Research Institute staff and fellows has examined the relationship between religious and spiritual beliefs and end-of-life fears and concerns. A paper describing the results was presented at the annual meeting of the Society for the Scientific Study of Religion, and a manuscript is currently being prepared for publication. The staff and fellows have also written a number of related theoretical and empirical articles about how spiritual and other beliefs affect the brain and mental health, two of which were published this year, and another of which will be published before the end of the year.
In 2004 HealthCare Chaplaincy identified a need for a residence in New York City for persons with serious progressive illness that would have at its core spirit-centered care.

Documenting this need are the demographics of the increasing aging population in New York City and the nation and the limited availability of appropriate health care and living arrangements for those with serious progressive illnesses:

- New York's elderly population will see a 44% increase to 1.35 million by 2030.
- There is a need for 1,100 market-rate assisted living units below 79th Street, according to a market study conducted by HealthCare Chaplaincy.
- New York already has large geriatric populations with limited access to geriatric services. This includes the Manhattan Lower East Side area where the Palliative Care Campus will be located.

At a time of skyrocketing health care costs for those with serious progressive illnesses, there is significant evidence that HealthCare Chaplaincy’s model will provide higher quality care at a significantly reduced cost.

For 50 years HealthCare Chaplaincy has provided patients and their families with spiritual, emotional and social support. HealthCare Chaplaincy has the experience to address these problems: spiritual care is a core part of palliative care that is often overlooked, and some of the more insistent developmental needs of seriously ill or dying persons are spiritual. People with serious progressive illness need a home—a safe haven—where spiritual needs are given as much attention as somatic and psychosocial needs.

HealthCare Chaplaincy's Palliative Care Campus has three goals:

1. To change the way care is provided for patients with serious progressive illness through care that is patient-centered, more accessible, more coordinated, and integrated.
2. To provide an optimal quality of life for patients and their significant others during illness.
3. To help residents better understand their choices for care and tailor treatment to meet individual needs.

The Campus will be located north of the Manhattan Bridge at 265-275 Cherry Street and next to the FDR Drive in the area known as Two Bridges. This site offers easy access to public transportation, is adjacent to the planned East River Esplanade, features plenty of natural light and an expansive view of the river, and is affordable.

Also, Two Bridges is a medically underserved area that is a low income tract and has a large elderly population with essentially no access to local geriatric care.
Components of the Palliative Care Campus

The Residence

Each floor of the 10-story, 120 unit palliative care residence will house 12 apartments, organized into two neighborhoods of 6 residents. Each floor will offer private as well as communal spaces for socializing and dining. The residence will offer each resident personal assistance, housekeeping, medication management, spiritual care, social and recreational activities, transportation, exercise programs, and family-support services.

The temporal and spiritual affairs of the residence will be supported by a team of dedicated professional staff and volunteers.

HealthCare Chaplaincy’s Research, Educational, Clinical Practice and Administrative Home

The Palliative Care Campus will be the new home for our research, educational and clinical practice divisions as well as the administrative base for our operations.

This co-location in a single space will significantly enhance collaboration and innovation within an organization which already achieves high levels of both.

Future plans include:

- In partnership with Teachers College at Columbia University, HealthCare Chaplaincy will offer its supervisory education students and other pastoral educators an opportunity to earn the Doctor of Education degree in Adult Learning & Leadership.
- The Spears Research Institute will conduct clinical trials of chaplaincy care interventions, outcome studies with family members and hospital staff, inquiries into the fundamental mechanisms linking religion and health, and evaluation studies of all the academic programs.

Medical Home

Individuals living in the residence and those living nearby will be able to obtain basic medical care, lab tests and therapy on site in a geriatric and palliative care medical home. The medical home is a multidisciplinary practice that will ensure in-patient and ambulatory care to its patients on a 24-hour basis; appropriate referrals to subspecialty services; consultation and interaction with our residence staff and our residents’ loved ones; and a central electronic medical record database, which will collect relevant health information.

Automated parking

To accommodate the parking requirements of its visitors, staff and neighbors, the Campus will include a 125-car, automated parking garage that will park and retrieve cars using a computerized system of shuttles, lifts and carriers. This system is reliable, safe and secure, utilizes a footprint one-third less than conventional garages, requires less lighting, and eliminates emissions because none of the vehicles are driven through the system.
A Highly “Green” and Sustainable Building

The Palliative Care Campus will be one of the first LEED (Leadership in Energy & Environmental Design) Platinum certified health care facilities in the United States and will demonstrate the importance of environmental health to spiritual, mental and physical health.

Some of the “green” features include green roofs, geothermal climate control, rain water collection for irrigation and flushing, and photovoltaic cells around the rim of each floor.

Community Outreach

HealthCare Chaplaincy has been working closely with community organizations in the Two Bridges area. Members of the community will be some of the first to live in the residence, and HealthCare Chaplaincy will hire members of the local community to work in the campus as staff.

Once complete, the campus will provide new green areas for the community and act as a sound and air pollution barrier against the FDR Drive.

Experienced Management Team

Two co-executive directors will manage the palliative care campus.

A professional board-certified palliative care chaplain will be responsible for management of the other staff chaplains, continuing education of all residence staff, resident and family relations, and all resident programs and services.

An experienced New York City licensed nonprofit assisted living operator will manage day-to-day business activities of the residence.

We have formed a Residence Advisory Council – experts from a diverse range of personal and professional expertise who will help shape the principles governing the culture of the Residence and guide development of the campus and provide recommendations for how residents can live in a healing way.

Lately she has also worked on film documentaries for various nonprofit organizations. She has served on boards at Choate Rosemary Hall and Villa Maria School and is looking forward to joining the work of the HealthCare Chaplaincy board. Susan holds a BA in English from Elmira College.

“My husband’s illness and passing showed me the value of quality end of life care. Chaplaincy has played an important part in my life and I am pleased to join a board that supports that mission.”

Kate Kibler is senior vice president of men’s merchandising and merchandise planning at Tommy Hilfiger, having joined the firm in 2004 as director of design. She received a B.S. in fashion design from Philadelphia University and an MBA in corporate finance and strategy from New York University's Stern School of Business.

“HealthCare Chaplaincy has a critical and unique mission aiding the medical community but more importantly, aiding patients,” says Kate. “So often the spiritual and psychological needs of patients and loved ones are overlooked. I look forward to helping the team at Chaplaincy contribute to the fulfillment of patient needs.”

Jeannette is working as a healer in an independent practice using Healing Touch Techniques and is pursuing certification at the Four Winds-Healing the Light Body School. She is a volunteer at the Lenox Hill Hospital Emergency Room and serves on the boards of The New York Society Library, The Open Center, and The North Haven Library.

She says, “I am excited to be working with such a capable group of people to help hospital patients. The palliative care offered is similar to my healing work with the body, mind and spirit of my clients. I am a firm believer in integrating spirituality with medical care.”

She holds a B.A. in international relations from Brown University and an M.B.A. in real estate from Columbia University.

“I am very pleased at a relatively young age,” says Susan, “to be working with a nonprofit that is focused on end of life issues and care. My own experience with my father at the time of his passing, was as meaningful and important as the birth of my children.”
Treasurer’s Report

The challenging economic environment continues to impact our operations, as is the case for the entire social/nonprofit sector. However, we are encouraged by improving investment returns.

Total support and revenue, excluding interest, dividends and net investment income, reached parity with the previous year at $5.2 million. Our investment portfolio valuation (including both restricted and unrestricted funds) changed from a loss of $5.1 million in 2009 to a gain of $3.1 million in 2010.

Total net assets increased by $1.5 million to $23.6 million.

On the spending side of the ledger, our reengineering and cost control efforts yielded impressive results. Total expenses declined by $1.3 million, from $8.6 million in 2009 to $7.3 million in 2010, or a 15% reduction. These expense reductions were primarily made in the administrative areas so that HealthCare Chaplaincy’s highly professional staff has continued to provide excellent service to our partner institution hospitals and long-term care facilities, our students, and in our research endeavors.

As HealthCare Chaplaincy pursues its bold vision to lead in the field of spirit-centered palliative care, it proceeds on a sound financial footing.

On November 10, 2009 nearly 500 health care, business and civic leaders attended the 23rd annual Wholeness of Life Awards Dinner at Cipriani 42nd St. The benefit raised close to $1,050,000 in support of HealthCare Chaplaincy’s innovative and evidence-based programs in research, education, and clinical practice.

The dinner honored health care professionals who recognize and tend to the whole person—spirit, mind and body.

Honorees included twelve patient care professionals from our metropolitan New York partner institutions.

Honored were HealthCare Chaplaincy and its Chief Executive Officer the Reverend Dr. Walter J. Smith, S.J. Introducing Father Smith was Thomas R. Rochon, Ph.D., President, Ithaca College, and presenting the award was John M. Templeton, Jr., M.D., Chairman and President, The John Templeton Foundation.

Lifetime Achievement honorees were Kathleen M. Foley, M.D., Professor of Neurology and Neurosurgery and Clinical Pharmacology at Weill Medical College of Cornell University and one of the world’s leading authorities in cancer pain management and palliative care; Jean B. Case, M.D., Internist, Preventive Medicine at New York Physicians, LLP and a specialist in internal medicine and rheumatology, and David B. Case, M.D., Executive Board Member, New York Physicians, LLP and an educator, researcher, clinician and expert in the field of hypertension.
